Swearwolf "Convertible Inferno"

SWEARWOLF is an indie rock band based in Burnaby, B.C. Canada. Mark Wiebe (Pacer /Guitaro/Sinewave) and Jason Pultz (Pacer/The Pauls) have been making music together off and on since high school. Twenty years later they formed a new band, but with the same goal: Make simple songs full of infectious riffs and big, crunchy guitar hooks.

Mark spends his time raising his family, programming, scoring video games, and licensing his music for television. Jason is a cat dad, and has been busy as a syndicated cartoonist and illustrator.

"Convertible Inferno" is the album for our times. Written and recorded on the 12th floor during darkened wildfire summer skies. This LP records the tensions of childish political super powers, online stalkers finding love, social media over exposure, wealth gaps, routine stops, renovictions, and the rigged financial casino system. The New Normal is here.
